3 Pigs (Peter, Petunia, Pug)

Running time: 14:00

- Narrator: Once upon a time, there lived three little pigs. Pigs enter. They played, went to school, and attended church with their family. Like all good little piglets, they eventually grew up, left home, and started to build their own lives.
- Peter: Okay, see you later.
- Petunia: Peter, where are you going?
- Peter: You heard the word, we're own our own. It's time we started building our own houses.
- Petunia: In today's fluctuating housing market, renting is a viable alternative, as well as a reasonable facsimile.
- Pug: I hate work! What's a facsimile?
- Narrator: And so, Peter departed and began work on his foundation.
- Petunia: Look at that! Peter is building his house on solid rock! Oh boy, that's a lot of hard work!
- Pug: I hate work!
- Petunia: Hey! I've got an idea! Do you have any money?
- Pug: No, but I plan to be filthy rich someday!
- Petunia: Good. Then you can pay me back - with interest!
- Pug: That depends on whether I'm interested.
- Petunia: Okay, okay. Here's the plan. We'll take this one talent that I buried -
- Pug: Interrupting. Mom and Dad said they hope I have some buried talent somewhere.
- Petunia: No, no. I'm talking about money.
- Pug: Talent is money?
